Governor Sayers was present with his attorney general and was chosen permanent chairman of the conference. Most of the day was spent in speechmaking, and almost every one of those present was afforded an opportunity to express his views on the question under discussion. There were several tilts between speakers of opposite political faith that gave spice to the proceedings.

At the morning session Governor Stephens of Missouri delivered filmself of a partisan fling at the Republican national administration, criticising its expansion policy and declaring that trusts and imperialism go hand in hand. Governor Shaw of Iowa took up the gauntlet thrown down by Stephens and, at the opening of the afternoon session, answered him with a speech that brought smiles to the faces of most of those present.

General Taylor of Indiana also took secasion to rap the knuckles of Missouri's governor.

There seemed to be a great difference of opinion as to the best method of remedying the so-called trust evil. Some of those present thought that the state laws now in vogue were sufficient to control the operations of the combinations complained of, while others were of the opinion that uniform laws should be enacted by the several states and by congress. He had heard it said in certain quarters that it was the purpose of the originators of this conference to give to it a political complexion. This statement he refuted in vigorous terms. It was the conception of the originators that this conference should be entirely informal, simply for the purpose of discussing a remedy for controlling "the trust evil."

He urged the enactment of uniform laws by the states to this end. The conference then recessed to 8:30 p. m.

The wonderful revolution that has occurred in business life is calculated to arouse the gravest anxiety in all thoughtful minds. For the past quarter of a century we have heard nuch of trust formation and notes of alarm have been sounded again and again to warn the people of the danger that threatened them in that direction. But during the past two years that which was previously but a shadow in the horizon has become a dark and portentious cloud, and on every side and from every quarter are heard warnings of imminent danger that should no longer pass unheeded.

Governor Sayer declared that in none of the generally accepted authorities upon finance, commerce or mechanic and agricultural industry can there be found a rational defense of the system that has so suddenly and so firmly fixed its iron grasp upon the material interests of the country. The gravity of the situation, the speaker declared, could not be over-estimated, nor permitted to pass unchallenged by those charged with important and responsible public duties. Suggestion From Pingree.

At the evening session, Governor Hazen S. Pingree of Michigan declivered an address which was closely listened to and frequently applauded. He said:

"The Chicago trust conference was of great value because it separated the chaff from the wheat. It did much to clarify the subject. It was of educational value. But its principal benefit to my mind, was the revealation it gare that should no longer pass unheeded."

Governor Sayer declared that in none of the generally accepted authorities with the sentiment will compel it. What form, therefore, shall that law take? In the absence of a uniform state law, a federal law is necessary. It should be a drastic law. I have no sympathy with the sentiment will compel it. What form, therefore
